

Anthropology

Sycamore Hall 119

This photograph was taken by Anthropology Alumnus, Justin Toney. The street art is part of the community artist project in Deep Ellum in Dallas, TX and is signed by Monica Diaz.

Department Overview

Broadly speaking, Anthropology is the study of how humans make sense of the world and each other. Anthropology majors at UNT focus their degree plan on advanced level study of peoples/ places (i.e. Maya, Africa, South Asia, South Pacific, Indigenous Southwest, Latin America) and topics (i.e. Social Media, Design, Urban, Medical, Religion, Environment, Tourism, Education, Race, Gender, Migration, Business, Language) in socio-cultural anthropology. Opportunities exist for students to reach deeper into their course of study through experiences that garner them credit through internships, directed studies, and undergraduate research projects. Our faculty's research interests intersect topics that have to do with the environment, sex and gender, social justice, public health, migration, education, and urbanism, etc. In addition, our professors specialize in an applied approach to anthropology which lends a practical and "real-world" dimension to our undergraduate curriculum.

Are you an Anthropology Major?

Our majors are people who are curious about the world. They ask questions. Our students are critical thinkers that want to see "culture" and humanity in a deeper and more complex way than the average person. They become professors, journalists, curators, advocates, lawyers, consultants, doctors, activists, educators, photographers, and conservationists. They make a difference in the world because they see the world in a different way.

Meet your...

Faculty Advisor
Professor Melissa Nelson
Sycamore Hall 120
940.369.8449
melissa.nelson@unt.edu

Schedule an Advising Appt.:
anthadvising.youcanbook.me

Department Chair
Dr. Lisa Henry
Sycamore Hall 121
940.565.4160
lisa.henry@unt.edu

For more information:

anthropology.unt.edu
@untanthropology